2024 AIYLA Award Submissions

Dear Publisher,

The American Indian Library Association (AILA) is open for submissions for our American Indian Youth Literature Awards (AIYLA). AIYLA identifies and honors the very best writing and illustrations for youth by and about Native Americans and Indigenous peoples of North America.

We are now conducting preliminary evaluations of qualifying titles published after October 1st, 2021 to be considered for the 2024 awards. Please consult our updated criteria to see which of your recent publications may be eligible. If you have any questions about eligibility, please contact the Jury Chair, Danielle Burbank, daniellefraggle@gmail.com.

Authors and illustrators may win the AIYLA in the categories Best Picture Book, Best Middle Grade Book, and Best Young Adult Book. In addition, up to five awards may be selected as Honors books in each category. Nominations are encouraged in fiction or nonfiction and may include graphic novels. For picture books, both author and illustrator are awarded. Please note both author and illustrator must identify as Indigenous because the awards represent the ideals of our multiple communities, and we consider Native authors and illustrators to be role models for young people. For that reason, AILA does not endorse authors who appropriate other cultures or who behave in ways that dishonor others. We request all authors and illustrators provide a biographical statement addressing their affiliation with or recognition by the Native community of which they claim to be a part.

AILA is soliciting submissions by Indigenous authors and illustrators throughout North America, including central Latin America, Canada, Alaska, and Hawaii. We encourage Indigenous languages or bilingual text, however the committee's common language is English.

Please send one copy of each title submitted for consideration no later than October 31, 2023. Jury member addresses will be provided. Thank you for supporting the American Indian Youth Literature Awards. Please contact me if you have any questions.

Sincerely,

Danielle Burbank & Joy Bridwell
